Excerpt from "The Old Seadog and the Black Spot"

Read the excerpt and then answer the questions that follow in complete sentences. Restate the question in your answer whenever possible.

He stayed for several months and never offered us any further payment. Whenever my father mentioned his bill, the captain would raise his voice and stare ominously at him until he retreated. I am sure the terror in which my father lived greatly hastened his death.

One morning, while the captain was out walking and taking in the salty sea air, another seafaring man arrived. I was setting the breakfast table when the door opened and the man stepped in. He was a pale, rascally looking creature, and I noticed he was missing two fingers.

"Is this here table for my mate Bill?" he asked, pointing to a table that had indeed been set for our secretive guest. It was not a straightforward question, and he uttered those words with more than a hint of sarcasm.

I told him the table was for a man who called himself the captain.

"Has he got a nasty scar on one cheek?" he inquired.

"Yes," I replied.

"Well, that would be my mate Bill. Is he here?" he continued.

"He's out taking a stroll," I explained.

The stranger announced that he would wait for his mate to return. Then he stood inside the door, peering out like a hungry cat waiting for a mouse. After a while, the captain strode in.

"Bill!" shouted the stranger.

The captain spun around. He had the look of a man who had seen a ghost.

"Black Dog!" he gasped.

"And who else?" returned the other. "Black Dog's come to see his old shipmate Billy Bones."

"Now look here," hissed the captain. "You've managed to run me down. What's your business?"

"I'll have a drink," said Black Dog. "Then we'll sit down and talk square, like old mates."

They sat down, and for a long time I could hear nothing but low mumbling. Gradually their voices grew louder until the interaction became a cacophony of unpleasant exchanges. This was followed by an explosion of crashing sounds—the chair and table went over, a clash of steel followed, and then a cry of pain. The next instant I saw Black Dog in full flight, and the captain in hot pursuit, both men with sabres drawn. Blood streamed from Black Dog's left shoulder. At the door, the captain aimed one last tremendous blow, which would certainly have struck Black Dog had it not been intercepted by the inn's signboard.

Black Dog, in spite of his wound, disappeared over the hill in half a minute. The captain stood staring like a bewildered man. At last he turned, staggered, gasped for breath, and grabbed the door with one hand.

"Jim!" he croaked. "Water!"

I ran to fetch him water, but as I fumbled with the jug, I heard a loud crash. Running back, I saw the captain lying on the floor. Immediately I heard my mother's footsteps on the stairs. Moments later she was standing beside me. Together, we gently raised the captain's head. It was clear that he needed a doctor, so we sent for Dr. Livesey. Then, as carefully as we could, we moved the captain into the parlor.

DATE:

Shortly after Dr. Livesey arrived, the captain opened his eyes and looked about.

"Where's Black Dog?" he mumbled.

"There's no Black Dog here," the doctor said. "You've had a stroke. Now lie back and rest."

Dr. Livesey drew some blood, and the old sailor fell asleep.

"He needs to rest for at least a week," said the doctor emphatically. "Another stroke will surely kill him."

Later, when the captain woke up, his first words were, "Black Dog!"

"Jim," he moaned, "you know I've been good to you. I'm pretty low and deserted by all. You'll help me, won't you?"

"But the doctor—" I began.

"Doctors! What do they know?" he growled. "What does that doctor know about seafaring men like me?"

Somewhat reluctantly, I agreed to help him. When I offered him water, he greedily gulped it down.

"Aye," said he, "that's better. Now, then, did that doctor say how long I'm supposed to lie here wasting time?"

"A week, at least," I said.

"Thunder!" he cried. "Out of the question! They'd have the black spot on me by then."

He attempted to sit up but fell back, weak and helpless on the bed. Then, after further contemplation, he spoke to me again.

"Jim," he said, "you saw Black Dog? He's a bad 'un, but there's worse than him after me. I hope I may get away from them yet. If I can't, and if they put the black spot on me, it's my old sea chest they're after. You go and see that doctor and tell him to send all hands—magistrates and such—to the Admiral Benbow. Tell him Captain Flint's men are here—or all that's left of the old crew. I was Flint's first mate, and I'm the only one who knows the place where he hid his loot. But don't tell the doctor unless they get me with the black spot, or you see Black Dog again—"

At that moment, he paused before continuing, "Or a seafaring man with one leg. Keep an eye out for him above all!" he concluded.

"But what is the black spot, Captain?" I asked.

"That's a summons, mate. Mutiny! Keep your wits about you, Jim, and I'll share with you equals, upon my honor," he continued.

His voice grew weaker as he said this, and soon he fell into a heavy sleep. I should have told the story to the doctor, but my poor father died quite suddenly that evening, which naturally put all other matters aside.

The day after my father's funeral, I was standing at the door full of sad thoughts when I saw a blind man slowly walking up the road. He wore a green mask over his eyes, and he tapped the ground with a stick. He was hunched, as if from age, and wore a hooded sea cloak.

As he drew near, he called out, "Will anyone inform a poor blind man who has lost his sight in the defense of England—God bless King George—where he may now be?"

"You are at the Admiral Benbow Inn," I explained.

"I hear a young voice," said he. "Will you lend me your hand and lead me in?"

The Real Adventure Begins

Read the following excerpt from "The Real Adventure Begins" and complete the activity that follows.

I said farewell to my beloved mother and the dear Admiral Benbow, and then joined up with Redruth, the squire's gamekeeper. We purchased our seats for the coach to Bristol. It picked us up around dusk and we arrived in Bristol as the sun was rising like a shimmering peach above the city.

Squire Trelawney was residing at an inn near the water. Along the quay lay ships of all sizes and nations. In one, sailors were singing as they worked in the morning fog that shrouded the quay. In another, men, high up in the rigging, were hanging by threads that seemed no sturdier than those of a spider's web. An overwhelming smell of tar and salt filled the air. I spotted old sailors with pigtails, and rings in their ears. It was all new to me, and I was captivated.

We went to see the squire. He was dressed like a naval officer, in a new suit.

"There you are!" he cried. "The doctor arrived last night. Now our ship's company is complete. We'll set sail early in the morning, at first light!"

The squire handed me a note to carry to Long John Silver. I made my way along the crowded quay, full of people and loaded carts, until I found the tavern.

It was brighter and cleaner than I expected. The windows glistened and the floor was cleanly sanded. The customers were seafaring men talking loudly and enthusiastically among one another.

As I was waiting, a man emerged from a side room. I deduced he must be Long John Silver. His left leg was missing, and he walked with the aid of a crutch. He managed the crutch with wonderful skill, hopping about on it like a sprightly bird. Silver was tall and strong, with a face as big as a ham, yet brimming with intelligence. He whistled as he moved among the tables and had a merry word or a slap on the shoulder for each of his guests.

From the first mention of John Silver in the squire's letter, I had feared that he might be the very one-legged sailor I had watched out for at the Admiral Benbow. But one look at the man was enough to convince me I had nothing to fear. I had seen the captain, I had seen Black Dog, and I had seen Pew. I thought I knew what a buccaneer looked like, and they were quite different from this clean and likeable landlord.

1. Why do you think the narrator describes Treasure Island as "a fasc	cinating place"?

All of a sudden, he was interrupted. Faraway out in the marsh arose an angry roar, then another. Tom jumped at the sound, like a horse pricked by a rider's spurs, but Silver winked not an eye. He stood resting lightly on his crutch, watching his companion, like a snake about to strike.

The figure flitted from trunk to trunk like a deer, but it ran on two legs like a man. I was tempted to cry for help, when another sighting reassured me that the creature was indeed a man. I took some comfort in this discovery, and in the fact I had just remembered I carried a pistol in my pocket. I put one hand on my pistol and took a few steps forward. At that precise moment, the man leaped out in the open, threw himself on his knees, and held out his hands as if begging for mercy.

I could see that he was an Englishman like myself, but his clothes were old and tattered, and his skin had been burned by the sun. In fact, his bright eyes looked quite startling on a face so burned.

"Who are you?" I demanded.

"I'm Ben Gunn, I am," he replied. His voice sounded like a rusty lock. "I haven't spoken with a man for three years! I am surprised I still know how to speak."

Excerpt from "The Plan"

Read the excerpt from Chapter 6 and then answer the questions that follow it.

The next morning, I was awakened by the sound of loud voices.

"Flag of truce!" I heard someone yell. Then, "It's Silver!"

I got up and rubbed my eyes. Sure enough, two men stood just outside the stockade—one of them was waving a white cloth, and the other was Silver himself.

"Stay inside," said the captain. "Ten to one says this is a trick." Then he shouted to the buccaneers, "Who goes there? Stand or we'll fire!"

"Flag of truce!" cried Silver.

"What do you want with your flag of truce?" Captain Smollett shouted back.

"Cap'n Silver wishes to make terms," the other man called out.

"Captain Silver?" said the captain. "Don't know him. Who's he?"

John Silver answered: "Me, sir. These poor lads have chosen me cap'n, after your desertion, sir. We're willing to submit, if we can come to terms, and no bones about it."

Captain Smollett agreed to meet with Silver—and only Silver. Silver threw his crutch over the fence, got a leg up, and, with great vigor and skill, climbed over the fence and dropped to the other side.

"Well, now," he said, "that was a good scare you gave us last night. We lost some men, but you mark me, cap'n, it won't work twice!" said Silver. "We want that treasure and we'll have it! You would just as soon save your lives, I reckon. We want the map, so if you hand it over, we won't do you no harm."

"Not a chance," replied the captain.

"Give us the map," said Silver, "and stop shooting poor seamen. If you do that, we'll give you a choice. You can come aboard with us once the treasure is stowed away, and I'll give you my word of honor to put you ashore somewhere safe. Or, if that ain't to your fancy, you can stay here. We'll divide the supplies with you, and I'll send the first ship I sight to pick you up."

"Is that all?" Captain Smollett asked. "Now hear me! If you come up one by one, unarmed, I'll clap you all in irons and take you home to a fair trial in England. If not, it won't end well for you."

Silver looked scornfully at the captain.

"Give me a hand up!" he cried.

"Not I," returned Captain Smollett.

"Who'll give me a hand up?" Silver roared.

Not one among us moved. Silver had to crawl along the sand, grumbling, till he got close to the door and could hoist himself up on his crutch. Then he spat into the spring.

"Before an hour's out, I'll knock in your old log house. Them that die will be the lucky ones!" he cried.

As soon as Silver left the stockade, we returned to our posts and loaded our muskets. There were several small holes in the walls of the log house. We peered out through the holes and waited for the onslaught.

"Put out the fire!" shouted the captain. "We mustn't have smoke in our eyes."

Suddenly, with a loud cry, a group of pirates leaped from the woods on the north side and ran straight toward the stockade. At the same time, gunfire opened from the woods. A rifle ball sang through the doorway and knocked the doctor's musket to bits.

The pirates climbed over the fence like monkeys. We fired at them, and immediately three of them fell to the ground. Four others made it over the fence and charged forward. In an instant, they were upon us.

"At 'em, all hands!" one of the pirates roared in a voice of thunder. One pirate grasped Hunter's musket and wrenched it out of his hands. With one stunning blow, he laid poor Hunter senseless on the floor. Meanwhile, another pirate appeared in the doorway and descended upon the doctor with his cutlass.

The log house was filled with smoke, cries, and confusion. Flashes and the reports of pistol shots rang out.

"Out, lads, and fight 'em in the open!" cried Captain Smollett.

7	Why do you think Captain Smollett says he doesn't know who Captain Silver is?
	Why do you think Captain Smollett and his men refuse to give Silver a hand up?

Excerpt from "My Life Hangs in the Balance"

Read the following excerpt and complete the activity that follows.

You all know what my plan was, and if we had stuck to it, we'd a been aboard the Hispaniola this night, every man of us alive, and the treasure stowed safely in the hold. Now you have the insolence to stand for cap'n over me—you, that sank the lot of us!"

Silver paused, and I could see by the other men's faces that these words had not been said in vain.

"You say this cruise is ruined," Silver continued. "By gum, you're right about that. We're close to being locked up, but there's one thing that may save us yet and that's this boy. You scurvy dogs want to kill him? What sort of a fool plan is that? Much better to keep him alive. Maybe you didn't know that there's a rescue boat coming to get these gentlemen, but there is, and when that boat arrives, you'll be glad we have a hostage to bargain with."

Silver spat on the ground and went on, "And as for why I made a bargain with the squire, well, look here!" As he spoke, he pulled the map out of his pocket. "Right here's why I done it!"

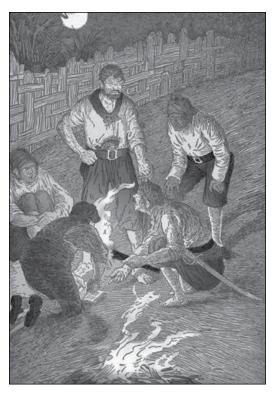

I looked and saw that it was the map with the three red crosses, the one I had found in the captain's sea chest. Dr. Livesey really had given it to Silver! But why? I could not imagine.

The other mutineers were stunned, too. They leaped on the map like ravenous beasts. It was passed from hand to hand, one tearing it from another, and by the oaths and the cries and the childish laughter with which they accompanied their examination, you would have thought they were fingering the gold itself, already loaded safely on the ship.

"Yes," said one, "it's Flint's writing, sure enough!"

"Then there's hope in it yet!" exclaimed another.

"Mighty pretty!" said George Merry. "But how are we to get away with the treasure now that the ship's gone?"

"How are we supposed to get away?" Silver barked angrily. "You ought to tell me—you and the rest that lost me my schooner! But no, you can't! You haven't got the invention of a cockroach. You lost the ship; I found the treasure. Who's the better man? By thunder, I resign! You can elect a new cap'n if you fancy. I'm done with it!"

By this point, the men had changed their minds. It was the map that convinced them.

"Silver!" they cried. "Silver for cap'n! John Silver forever!"

"So that's the tune, is it?" said Silver. "Well, George, I reckon you'll have to wait another turn. Here, Jim—here's a curiosity for you."

He handed me the paper the men had given him. I saw that one side had been blackened with wood ash, while the other displayed the word deposed.

After this, Silver tied me up, and we all went to sleep. Well, all except me, that is. I had trouble sleeping. As I lay in the darkness, I thought of the man I had fought that afternoon and my perilous

Unit Assessment — Treasure Island

Reading Comprehension

Today you will read two selections related to the story of Treasure Island. After reading the first selection, you will answer several questions based on it. Then, you will read the second selection and answer several questions based on it. Some of the questions have two parts. You should answer Part A of the question before you answer Part B.

The Escape from the Hispaniola

(As told by Dr. Livesey)

- Much of Treasure Island, by Robert Louis Stevenson, is narrated from the first-person point of view of young Jim Hawkins. However, many events occur when the narrator is not around. For example, while Jim is exploring the island, the other crew members are embarking on adventures of their own. In the story that follows, Dr. Livesey is the narrator. He explains what happened to him and the other men while Jim was off exploring the island.
- It was about half-past one when the Hispaniola reached Treasure Island. Thirteen men were to go ashore and six were to remain on the Hispaniola. Shortly afterward, we learned that Jim Hawkins had sneaked into a boat and gone ashore. It never occurred to us to doubt Jim, but we were worried about him. We were not sure we would ever see him again.
- Hunter, one of the squire's men, and I decided to go ashore as well. We steered a small rowboat ashore and discovered a stockade. I recognized that it would be a splendid fortress if ever we needed one. An abundant spring flowed with fresh water and small holes dotted the walls for weapons. It would be easy to defend the place against an entire regiment of experienced soldiers.
- While we were inspecting the stockade, Hunter and I heard a blood-curdling scream. It was the anguished cry of a man who had been injured seriously. My first thought was, "Jim Hawkins is gone!"

- Hunter and I ran to the small boat and rowed back to the Hispaniola. The squire and the others had heard the cry, as well, and were all shaken.
- It became evident that we could no longer stay onboard with the pirates. We determined that it would be in our best interest to relocate to the stockade Hunter and I had discovered.
- We set up Redruth, another of the squire's men, as a guard. We provided him with three loaded muskets and a mattress for protection. Hunter brought the landing boat 'round under the stern, and I loaded her with powder, muskets, bags of biscuits, kegs of pork, my medicine chest, and other essential supplies. Then, all the remaining good gentlemen climbed aboard and we shoved off.
- The small boat was gravely overloaded. Onboard were five grown men, and three of them—Squire Trelawney, Redruth, and the captain—were over six feet tall. Several times we took on a little water, and my breeches and the tails of my coat were soaking wet before we had gone a hundred yards.
- Besides sinking, we were worried about one other possible danger—the cannons on the Hispaniola. The pirates did not have muskets, but they might well fire one of the cannons. We had heard that Israel Hands was Captain Flint's gunner. We kept an eye peeled on the ship and soon noticed that they were, in fact, preparing to fire upon us.
- "Trelawney," barked the captain. "Stop these men. Israel Hands, if possible."
- 11 Trelawney was as cool as steel. He calmly primed his gun.
- "Careful!" said the captain. "We mustn't swamp the boat."
- The squire raised his gun. The rowing ceased and we leaned over the other side to keep the balance. Trelawney fired, but we had no luck. He had missed Israel Hands.
- 14 The other pirates were too preoccupied with priming the cannon to notice the shot.
- Suddenly, boom! The cannon fired.

- The ball passed over our heads. We ducked, and our sudden movement caused the boat to rock and tip to one side. Water began to gush into the boat. It sank by the stern, quite gently, in three feet of water. Since the water was shallow, we were able to stand up and rescue some of our supplies. We carried the supplies over our heads to keep them dry and waded ashore as fast as we could, leaving the small boat behind, along with half of our powder and provisions.
- To add to our concern, we heard voices drawing near us in the woods along the shore. We figured it must be Silver and his crew. We soon realized that we were in danger of being cut off from the stockade. At the same time, I was wondering about poor Jim's fate, when suddenly I heard a voice from the land side.
- "Doctor! Squire! Captain! Hello, Hunter, is that you?" came the cries.
- I ran to the door in time to see Jim Hawkins, safe and sound, climbing over the stockade.

Pirates, Parrots, and Pieces of Eight

Treasure Island seems to have inspired some popular beliefs about pirates and piracy. However, some of the story's details about pirates are accurate and others are not. Each of the following sections introduces historic or scientific evidence to set straight common myths and misunderstandings about pirates and piracy. Each section also explains which details about pirates and piracy could have been accurate in Treasure Island.

Parrots

- One of the most well-known characters from Treasure Island is Long John Silver's parrot, Captain Flint. The talkative bird has become so iconic that many people believe every pirate had a parrot. Some people think of parrots as the symbolic pet for pirates. Historians say that was probably not the case. It would have been difficult to carry a parrot with you everywhere, as Long John Silver did. Also, when pirates' food ran out, a parrot might have been in danger of becoming something other than a pet!
- However, many details about parrots in the story are accurate. Parrots are intelligent and really can learn to repeat single words and short phrases. If a pirate did have a pet parrot, it might have learned to mimic a phrase like "pieces of eight."
- Parrots are native to tropical areas. Many varieties are found in Central and South America. There are more than 350 species of parrots in warm climates all over the world. It is thus possible they would be native to the Spanish Main.
- Parrots typically live 30 to 50 years, but some species live more than 80 years. That's not quite the 200 years old Captain Flint was said to be, but still a long lifespan for a pet.

Pieces of Eight

"Pieces of eight" were Spanish coins made of silver. They were first created a few years after Christopher Columbus landed in the Americas. Each piece of silver was worth eight reales (Spanish coins), which is why they were called "pieces of eight." Reference to "pieces of eight" in Treasure Island is thus historically accurate.

- The Spanish conquistadors who came after Columbus conquered much of South America. In Peru and elsewhere, they set up large silver mines. They had the native people dig out the silver ore. Then they melted the ore down to make coins—coins that pirates were eager to steal!
- Although Spain issued pieces of eight, people in many other countries used them, too. The silver they contained was valuable, so people were willing to accept the coins as payment. People used pieces of eight in the United States until 1854—just before the Civil War.
- The United States began minting its own coins in the 1790s. They stamped pieces of metal, creating coins similar to pieces of eight. Back then, a U.S. dollar was worth "eight bits." Two bits were equal to a quarter. Later, the United States switched to a monetary system in which a dollar represented one hundred cents. However, people continued referring to "bits" even after the new system was introduced.

Pirates

- Pirates were much more interested in loot than in taking prisoners or fighting others. The amount and kind of violence was likely different from the violence in Treasure Island. Instead of fighting violently, pirates generally held prisoners for ransom or marooned them. Pirates often set captured crews free with their ships after stealing their goods.
- The so-called golden age of piracy began in the 1500s, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth I. This golden age lasted until the early 1800s. Around that time, the United States and European navies ended the practice. The time period during which Treasure Island was set probably coincided with the golden age of piracy. Thus, the timing in the story could have been accurate. However, contrary to how piracy was portrayed in Treasure Island, it was not a fun and adventurous way of life. It was actually a serious business, not something a young boy like Jim Hawkins would have wanted to be part of.

Passage 1: "Mercury and the Woodman," by Aesop

- A poor Woodman was cutting down a tree near the edge of a deep pool in the forest. It was late in the day and the Woodman was tired. He had been working since sunrise and his strokes were not so sure as they had been early that morning. Thus it happened that the axe slipped and flew out of his hands into the pool.
- The Woodman was in despair. The axe was all he possessed with which to make a living, and he had not money enough to buy a new one. As he stood wringing his hands and weeping, the god Mercury suddenly appeared and asked what the trouble was. The Woodman told him what had happened, and straightway the kind Mercury dived into the pool. When he came up again, he held a wonderful golden axe.
- "Is this your axe?" Mercury asked the Woodman.
- 4 "No," answered the honest Woodman, "that is not my axe."
- Mercury laid the golden axe on the bank and sprang back into the pool. This time he brought up an axe of silver, but the Woodman declared again that his axe was just an ordinary one with a wooden handle.
- Mercury dived down for the third time, and when he came up again, he had the very axe that had been lost.
- The poor Woodman was very glad that his axe had been found and could not thank the kind god enough. Mercury was greatly pleased with the Woodman's honesty.

- "I admire your honesty," he said, "and as a reward you may have all three axes, the gold and the silver as well as your own."
- The happy Woodman returned to his home with his treasures, and soon the story of his good fortune was known to everybody in the village. Now there were several Woodmen in the village who believed that they could easily win the same good fortune. They hurried out into the woods, one here, one there, and hiding their axes in the bushes, pretended they had lost them. Then they wept and wailed and called on Mercury to help them.
- And indeed, Mercury did appear, first to this one, then to that. To each one he showed an axe of gold, and each one eagerly claimed it to be the one he had lost. But Mercury did not give them the golden axe. Oh no! Instead he gave them each a hard whack over the head with it and sent them home. And when they returned the next day to look for their own axes, they were nowhere to be found.
- 11 Honesty is the best policy.

Passage 2: "Benjamin Banneker"

- Imagine that you are given an old-fashioned pocket watch. Because you are a curious person and you are interested in how the watch works, you take it apart. Looking at the array of watch parts, you have an idea. Is it possible to use the watch as a model and build a large clock with the same kinds of working parts? It sounds like it could work, but where will you begin? How will you enlarge the design of the watch to build the clock? What materials will you use for the clock parts? It sounds challenging, doesn't it? Believe it or not, a man named Benjamin Banneker accomplished this task in 1753—more than 250 years ago. And he did it without the use of modern tools or technology. He built the clock from wood, and he carefully carved each of the gears. That clock ran for more than 40 years and kept almost perfect time. Benjamin Banneker used his brilliant mind in this and other ways to examine and improve the world around him.
- Benjamin Banneker was born near Baltimore, Maryland, in 1731. Many African Americans were enslaved during this time in American history, but Benjamin was born a free man. Benjamin grew up on his family's farm. When he was young, his grandmother taught him to read. Later, Benjamin went to a nearby school where he showed great skill in mathematics and science. Benjamin's schooling did not last long, however, because he was needed on the family farm. While working on the farm, Benjamin created an irrigation system that allowed crops to be watered even during dry times. The irrigation system was made up of ditches and small dams. The system controlled water that flowed from springs near the farm.
- Banneker was in his early 20s when he built his famous clock. But that accomplishment didn't satisfy his curiosity about the world around him. He continued to learn and grow. When he was older, Banneker began to teach himself astronomy. Astronomy is the study of the sun, moon, stars, planets, and other bodies in space. This area of study fascinated Banneker. He loved astronomy so much that he built a cabin with a skylight. Through this window in the roof, he could observe the sky during the day and at night. Banneker used his observations to record the weather and the appearance of stars in the sky. He used his outstanding mathematical abilities to calculate the tides and correctly predict eclipses of the sun and the moon.

- Benjamin Banneker decided to create an almanac in which he would publish all the useful information that he gathered. Each year between 1792 and 1797, Banneker published an almanac that included all of his astronomical calculations and weather predictions. Readers used the facts in their daily lives. They also enjoyed the puzzles, health tips, and advice on farming that were included in the pages.
- Benjamin Banneker's abilities were outstanding. People who knew him thought he could put his skills to use in other areas. Thomas Jefferson was among those who were made aware of Banneker's talents. At that time, Jefferson was secretary of state under President George Washington. Jefferson requested that Banneker be made part of a group that was planning the design for the nation's capital. In 1791, Banneker was made an assistant to Major Andrew Ellicott. Major Ellicott was the man appointed by President Washington to lay out the boundaries for the area. Banneker used his mathematical abilities to help plan the way that Washington, D.C., would look in the years to come.
- In 1791, Banneker also sent a copy of the manuscript for his first almanac to Thomas Jefferson. Along with the almanac manuscript, Banneker included a letter to Jefferson that expressed how he felt about slavery. Banneker felt that slavery should be abolished, or ended, and that the abilities of African Americans like himself should be recognized. Jefferson reacted favorably to the almanac and responded to Banneker's comments politely. However, it would be years before slavery was abolished in the United States.
- As Banneker grew older, he continued to observe the natural world around him and to support the anti-slavery movement. He had become well-known and widely respected, and he often enjoyed visits from scientists and others who admired his work. Benjamin Banneker died at his home in 1806. Today the contributions of this farmer, scientist, mathematician, astronomer, writer, and city planner are recognized around the world. In 1980, the U.S. Postal Service remembered the contributions of Benjamin Banneker by issuing a stamp in his honor.

Passage 3: "The Circulatory System"

- If you have ever cut your finger or scraped your knee, you know what your own blood looks like. But have you ever wondered why you need blood or how your blood travels through your body? Long ago, people did not know a lot about blood. For example, it was once thought that bloodletting, or taking blood from a person, would help a sick person. People thought bloodletting would allow a disease to flow out of a person who was ill. Today we know this is not true. Modern scientists and medical professionals have learned a great deal more about blood. They have also learned more about the way blood moves through the body.
- Blood has many important jobs in the body. It carries life-giving oxygen to body cells and removes carbon dioxide. Blood also moves nutrients from food to body tissues, and it carries away waste products. Some cells in blood help protect the body against disease. Blood also helps distribute heat throughout the body. In addition, it carries the hormones that a body needs to grow and function.
- Your blood moves through your body along a network called the circulatory system. The circulatory system is made up of the heart, blood vessels, and blood itself. At one time, it was thought that blood was constantly being made and used up in the body. This idea came from an ancient Greek physician, or doctor, named Galen. Galen believed that the food we eat was turned into blood in the liver. He thought that blood flowed through the veins into the body where it was used up. Then new blood would be made. In the 1600s an English physician named William Harvey proved that this was not true.
- William Harvey was a physician at a hospital in London, England. He was also a doctor to two English kings. Harvey observed blood flow in animals and in the bodies of humans. He confirmed that the heart is an organ that pumps blood through the body. He discovered that blood vessels have valves in them that stop the blood from flowing back the wrong way. In 1628, Harvey published a book that explained how blood is pumped from the heart through the body and then returned to the heart again. His paper proved that blood was circulated over and over again in the body. Harvey also explained the pulse we feel in our bodies. He said the pulse is caused by blood vessels that expand, or grow larger, each time the heart contracts and sends out blood. Harvey's work changed the way doctors thought of the heart and blood vessels.

- So just how does the circulatory system work? Let's begin with the heart and blood vessels. The heart is a muscular organ that is about the size of a person's fist. It pushes blood out when it contracts, or squeezes together, and it pulls blood in when it relaxes. The blood vessels make up the "pipeline" through which blood flows. You have so many blood vessels in your body, they could circle the earth more than two times if they were strung together! There are different kinds of blood vessels. Arteries are large blood vessels that carry blood away from the heart. The arteries take blood to tiny blood vessels called capillaries. The capillaries are the connections between arteries and veins. Veins are the blood vessels that take blood back to the heart.
- Blood itself is made up of liquid and solid particles. The liquid is called plasma. Plasma is made mostly of water, proteins, and minerals. The solids in blood are called red blood cells, white blood cells, and platelets. The red blood cells carry oxygen and carbon dioxide. The white blood cells protect the body from disease and infection. Platelets help the blood clot. Without the clotting substances in platelets, blood would keep flowing from a wound and a person might bleed to death.
- What happens during blood circulation? The heart pumps blood to the lungs where the blood mixes with oxygen. The blood then goes back to the heart again and is pumped through the arteries to the capillaries. As the blood travels through the capillaries, oxygen and nutrients are delivered to body tissues. The blood also picks up carbon dioxide and other waste products that the body does not need. The blood crosses through the capillaries into the veins. Now it's on its way back to the heart. When the blood reaches the heart, it is pumped into the lungs. In the lungs, carbon dioxide is removed from the blood and fresh oxygen is mixed with the blood again. Other waste products have already been removed from the blood along the way by the liver and the kidneys.
- Your heart, blood, and blood vessels do an amazing job of making sure your body stays strong, healthy, and alive. And they do it in a very short time. It might seem that it would take hours or even days for blood to circulate through your body. But it takes less than a minute. The circulatory system is one of the most important systems in your body. The next time you feel your pulse or hear your heartbeat, remember how hard your circulatory system is working for you!

Paul Bunyan

Even as a baby, Paul Bunyan was mighty big. How big? Well, he was so big that his	18
parents had to use a covered wagon for his cradle.	28
As you might imagine, young Paul Bunyan had a big appetite. He gobbled up five	43
	60
evening just to keep his baby bottle filled.	68
Paul was so big it caused some problems in the little town in Maine where he grew	85
up. When he sneezed, he blew the birds from Maine to California. When he snored, the	101
neighbors ran out of their houses hollering, "Earthquake! Earthquake!"	110
After that, Paul's father thought it might be better if Paul didn't sleep in town. He built	127
a cot on a large raft for Paul and floated it off the coast. Paul slept on the raft for a few	149 nights, but the floating cot didn't work out. When Paul turned over in his sleep, he created	166
gigantic waves that knocked down houses along the coast.	175
Eventually, Paul's father decided that the East Coast was just too small for Paul	189
Bunyan. The only sensible thing to do was to move out West. So the Bunyan family	205 moved to Minnesota. In those days Minnesota was full of logging camps, sawmills, and	219 lumberjacks. Americans were moving west and "building the country." They had to cut	232 down a lot of trees to make their homes, not to mention their schools, churches, boats,	248
and furniture.	250

Meaning (It sounds right when I read it aloud.)
All my sentences have a subject and predicate.
I included all the words I wanted to write.
I removed repeated words or information.
I have checked the lengths of my sentences and have split run-on sentences into two.
I have used strong verbs and figurative language where possible.
Format
All my paragraphs are indented.
I have a title on the front.
Capitals
I began each sentence with a capital letter.
I used capital letters for all proper nouns.
Spelling
I have checked the spelling for any words I was unsure of or my teacher marked.
Punctuation
 I read my writing aloud to check for commas at pauses and to check for periods, question marks, and exclamation points at the end of my sentences.
I used commas and quotation marks in places where they belong.
